City exploring rehab program for dilapidated homes

by Lindy Magner

With the recent town meeting, there's been a lot of concern expressed about "rundown" neighborhoods.

The city's new management analyst, Robert Richardson, thinks one solution may be the development of a "Christmas in April" program which communities were encouraged to begin during the Bush Administration.

"One day a year, volunteers go in and refurbish a group of targeted homes, inside and out," he said, explaining that National City has had such a program for a few years.

David Sheldon, coordinator of the National City program dubbed Christmas in July, affiliated with the national organization, Christmas in April, said that 50 houses have been refurbished in four years. With a total of $40,000 in donations and city funds, $300,000 in improvements have been done.

"This takes away some of the blight and substandard housing," Sheldon said, noting that about 15 houses are tackled each July.

"Some of the houses are in really bad shape, and their owners have bad credit and wouldn't be able to get loans to do the things that we're doing. Some of these people are handicapped or elderly, and their houses just deteriorate," he said.

About 300 to 400 volunteers, including electricians, plumbers and carpenters, participate in the program which, in reality, spans several weeks rather than just one day.

Council approves budgets for sanitation, lighting districts

At its Tuesday briefing meeting, the City Council adopted fiscal 1994-95 budgets for the Lemon Grove Sanitation District and the Roadway and Lighting District.

The main city budget was adopted at last week's council meeting, with the redevelopment budget yet to be presented.

Also at the briefing meeting, council adopted a resolution which amends the Solid Waste Management Authority joint-powers agreement which the city recently entered. The amendment extends the deadline from June 30 to July 31 for cities wishing to withdraw from the agreement.

In other business, City Manager Doug Yount asked the city for direction on signing an amendment to the memo of understand-

He explained that though July 23 is the main day for the repairs, some projects such as putting on a new roof or stucco and dry wall work begins shortly after July 4.

Though the city administers the program, the National City Chamber of Commerce provides meeting space and allows the program to be operated from its office.

Sheldon said the chamber wasn't interested in financially funding the program, but "lent its good name" to the cause, which Sheldon used in soliciting donations from businesses. The city contributes $9,000 annually to the program, with about that same amount collected from contributions, he said.

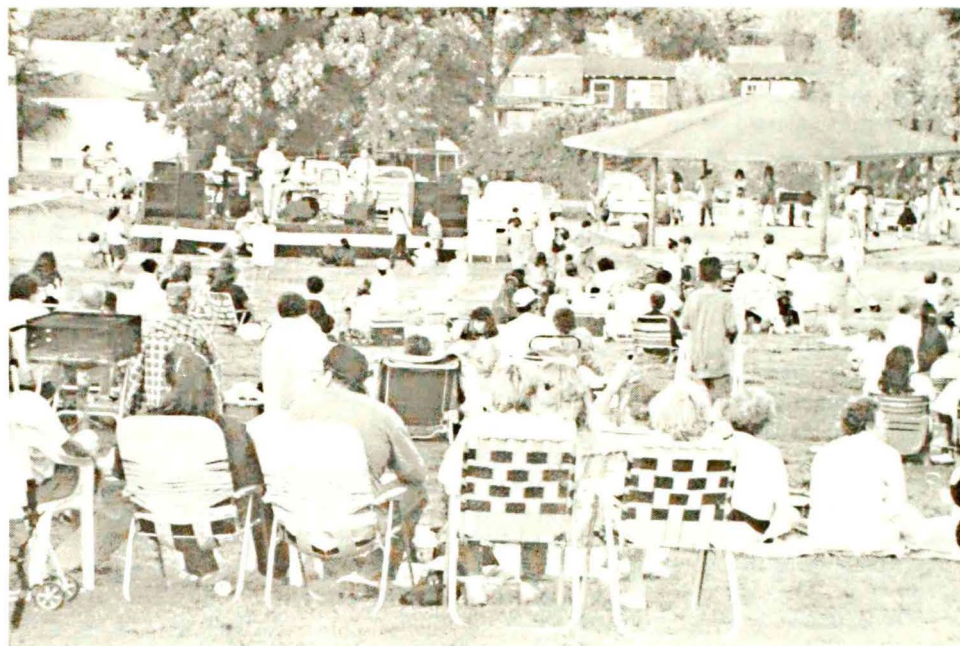

Richardson said Lemon Grove is hoping to begin a similar program, and recently distributed an informational flyer to community groups, in hopes of getting a sponsor for such a program.

He said that if the program is aimed at rehabilitating the homes of low-income residents, then city redevelopment funds could be used for the program.

"This is a wonderful and very cost-effective way to rehabilitate a community," Richardson said. He noted that the National City program has benefited from The Home Depot, which has donated material and employee "expertise," and he hopes Lemon Grove's Home Depot will follow suit.

He said that if a program is begun here, the first year it will probably just address "cosmetic" repairs and later tackle structural repairs as well.

Concerts in the Park begin season

The heat wave may have cut the crowd some, but those who came enjoyed the first Concert in the Park. The Chamber of Commerce was on hand with food and drinks, as usual.

Can ADAPT adapt to funding loss?

by Lindy Magner

Effective tomorrow, the county Department of Health Services' alcohol and drug services division will no longer be allocating monies to ADAPT, a coalition of elected officials which pushes for legislation to better control alcohol and drug abuse.

For example, the 55-member coalition which includes city council members, school board members, judges and a county supervisor, drafted the beer-keg tagging legislation which the state Legislature passed last year. The purpose of the bill was to hold sellers of kegs responsible for making sales to minors.

ADAPT Executive Director Linda Orevec said it's too soon to tell just how what effect this loss of $100,000 - more than two-thirds of the organization's budget - will have.

She said that $28,000 of the organization's remaining budget comes from United Way and private donations as well as from membership fees charged each of the 55 participating jurisdictions.

"On July 1, we'll start applying for funding grants," she said.

Created in 1983 as a project of the city of San Diego, the organization expanded to the entire county in 1987, explained Orevec, who was hired in 1990 to reorganize ADAPT and move its mission more toward public policy changes and educational programs regarding substance abuse.

According to Joan Friedenberg, administrator of county Alcohol and Drug Services, the alcohol services advisory board made the recommendation that the funding for ADAPT be redirected to community substance-abuse prevention programs.

She said the funding of prevention programs over other activities is also a priority expressed by the county Board of Supervisors.

"The decision has nothing to do with whether ADAPT is doing good work or not," she said, adding that the county will still participate on the ADAPT board and pay its annual membership dues of $12,500.

In defense of highway pursuits

by CHP Commissioner Maury Hannigan

When a pursuit crash takes a life, particularly that of a bystander (in 1993 there were eight such deaths in 7,781 pursuits), the ensuing emotional tide temporarily overwhelms logic. The family that loses a loved one in a pursuit crash reaches for the solace of prevention: "Let's not repeat this needless tragedy. Let's do away with police pursuits." For the California Highway Patrol — and every police agency that engages in pursuits — the challenge remains that of keeping the public view of pursuits on an even keel.

I have appeared on Donahue and other high-visibility programs to explain the police position, which I believe should be an extension of what is (or should be) society's position.

Pursuits are a critical law enforcement tool. Without the authority to pursue, we submit to the criminal and society throws in the towel.

The audacious crime has become routine, and virtually always involves a vehicle. Criminals use cars, criminals flee in cars, and criminals often draw attention to themselves by their flagrant disregard for traffic regulations. Police find themselves in pursuit, with perhaps their best opportunity to apprehend. If police give up pursuit, control of the highways shifts to the criminal.

Media accounts of pursuit crash deaths leave the impression that most pursued drivers have done nothing more serious than failing to replace a burned-out tail light. But 75 percent of the drivers apprehended in CHP pursuits fit one of these three categories: They are: 1) driving under the influence; 2) driving a stolen vehicle; or 3) sought on a felony charge.

It is important to weigh the risk. If police back off when a drunk driver flees, then more drunks will take advantage of the chance to run. Alcohol-related crashes now claim 1,700 to 1,800 lives annually in California. If that total goes up even 5 percent because drunks can avoid arrest by running away, we will sacrifice 80 or 90 lives each year.

The fact is, if we preclude the use of pursuits, far more citizens will be put at risk than is presently the case.

I question media emphasis on the occasional pursuit tragedy with no parallel reference to the hundreds of pursuits that end without incident.

This leaves the public floating on a sea of mistaken impressions, with no anchoring explanation of what happens in most pursuits — an apprehension, nothing else. The thin veneer of knowledge about how pursuits really work means most people know nothing of the tight controls police put on the process.

Responsible police agencies define when and how pursuits may be conducted, when they should be called off (the CHP aborts about one in five pursuits), and what disciplinary action awaits officers who violate policy.

All of this outlines the need for intensive training. CHP cadet trainees receive 40-48 hours of behind-the-wheel enforcement driving, including a practical problem in pursuit. A driving instructor flees, and the cadet must pursue and apprehend — safely. Cadets who fail this (or any major element of driver training) don't become Highway Patrol officers.

Police management holds the final key to the proper conduct of pursuits: administrative review of every pursuit — the ones that go right, as well as those ending in a crash. Highway Patrol pursuit philosophy can be summed up this way: Establish a firm policy, train officers thoroughly, review every pursuit, correct mistakes, discipline those who violate policy.

The idea is to rule emotions out of the process, to the fullest extent we can. The officer in a pursuit should be responding to mental calculations, not emotional stimuli. Training and the observant eye of concerned management makes this possible.

But even a well-thought-out policy and superior training won't bring the pursuit crash total down to zero. There will always be a slight risk, just as there is collision risk for anyone who rides in a car.

Abolishing pursuits eliminates the wrong risk. We lose more than we gain. We relinquish control of the roads to the lawless; we back away where we should confront. If we abolish pursuits, we increase the chance of tragedy, not diminish it.

dues, ADAPT could easily raise more than the $100,000 in county funding it will soon lose.

Orevec responded that while that is probably true, it's difficult to collect dues from struggling cities and school districts.

"More than half of our members are school districts, many of which are financially strapped; and some of our cities are in the red. It's not a realistic expectation in these economic times," she said.

"It seems that it should be the responsibility of the county to provide for a regional program which has been proven to be effective," she said.

The city of Lemon Grove's 1994-95 budget allocates $850 for ADAPT membership dues.

B-Words

Citizen concerns

The BB box was full after our recent vacation, so I will try to catch up on addressing concerns and comments.

It is mostly apology for our municipal duties not being carried out in a timely manner. We, at the city, are building up a sizable list of things to do - when and if we get some additional discretionary income from the Home Depot and Bob Baker businesses.

The tree trimming and grounds maintenance in the Washington Street Park and the trash bin thefts at Berry Street Park are problems. We just have a skeleton crew (and even one with the bones missing) to handle the parks and street landscaping in Lemon Grove. However, help is on the way with the new budget restoring one of the grounds worker positions and creating a supervisor for county work release labor.

Vandalism, breaking windows, and graffiti are ongoing and are handled in as expeditious fashion as our crew can perform. We do not need a council meeting to correct these things, but money and manpower are in meager supply.

Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

The same with the landscaping work in our parks. Sometimes it occurs that delays in finishing a job are necessary due to other more urgent demands.

The Home Depot is experiencing some theft problems and is taking precautions to prevent more. As with any new facility, I imagine that it is a prime target for shoplifters and petty thieves. I can only say that we have not had the expected invasion of illegals harassing their customers as was prevalent at the University Avenue location. I guess they haven't come to the realization that the store has moved. I hope they never do.

I would also ask that the management of the VFW facility on Lemon Grove Avenue please consider the neighbors when they have their functions. On hot nights, it is tempting to open the windows of the hall, but the music and noise do emanate to an entire block of residences across the street. Many of the adjoining homes belong to veterans, and their reluctance to criticize the VFW is understandable, but they have the right to be comfortable and safe in their homes. The Golden Rule must apply in situations like these ... and gentle consideration of one's fellow man should moderate behavior.

As a member of the Senior Volunteer Patrol, I can attest that we are flagged down often with help from the community doing our job. I would certainly encourage that communication, and say that we VP patrollers really appreciate it. Very often there are abandoned vehicles and neighborhood problems that we cannot be immediately aware of. We do our vacation checks, our YANA (You Are Not Alone) calls on homebound residents, and abandoned vehicle rechecks in the first two hours of a six-hour shift.

From then on, we check handicapped spaces and cruise the neighborhoods. We LOVE the reception and welcoming waves that we get as we do. We are eager to hear from our citizenry, and to help in any way that we can. If there ever was a reversal of the oxymoron of a "government official saying, 'we are here to help,'" we are it.

Next time you see us, or any law enforcement person, give us your input, or just a wave. The thumb up is the proper finger sign to give.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

"What a gorgeous day in San Diego," gushes the talking "weatherhead."

The talking "anchorhead" in the studio agrees and then brings in another talking head on remote assignment. He is at the beach, standing ankle deep in water and surrounded by a bevy of scantily-clad lovelies.

"It is marvelous out here at La Jolla Cove," he enthuses. "Just the kind of day to make San Diegans happy." He briefly interviews a few of those around him in the surf and then dutifully "returns it" to his colleagues in the frostily air conditioned studio.

Now the weatherhead moves over to the county map and begins his discussion of the local weather. "San Diego," he announces, "is a lovely 80 degrees." (Of course this is recorded at Lindbergh Field.) Looking elsewhere on the map, I can see that it's 106 degrees in Santee and Ramona, 102 degrees in El Cajon, 96 degrees in Alpine, and also a cool 96 degrees in the general area where I reside (including La Mesa).

Wiping the sweat from my forehead and eyes, I ask of the TV set, "what kind of stupid nut are you? Aren't we part of San Diego, too? What do you mean, it's a gorgeous day?"

This goes on in San Diego all the time. Most of us can only go to the beach for maybe one afternoon a week - and with that being on the weekend, traffic and parking are so difficult, we may take in an air-conditioned movie instead. The lion's share of San Diego's population lives well away from the beach - especially we East County residents. Despite this, the good or bad of San Diego weather is always judged by what it's like at the beach.

Drowning in sweat

Give us a break, for Pete's sake! When the temperature is a scorching 98-108 degrees here in the eastern part of the county, let's hear these carefully marcelled weatherheads tell it like it is! I mean, it's hotter than hell out here; I have no air conditioning, I can't see what I'm writing because of the sweat rolling into my eyes and this idiot is telling me what a sensational day it is.

Yes, I know, San Diego is a tourist mecca, and it's important to have lots of sun and warmth for the visitors, but must every day be judged purely on the basis of sunshine and heat?

I've seen days when cloud formations made the skies a wonderland for imaginers and the temperature was a breezy 70 degrees and heard these days described as "not-so-nice weather" by the weatherheads.

I guess I must be alone in my perspiration after all because most people I meet agree with the weatherheads that San Diego is only really "America's Finest City" when the sun is mercilessly beating down and the temperature in East County is 106 degrees.

Maybe the only thing I can do is to stop watching the TV news. I wouldn't know what's going on, but at least I wouldn't get so mad. Of course, I could go to another air conditioned movie, too. Wonder what's playing today?

(In all fairness, by the time this reaches you, the weatherheads have indeed acknowledged the heat wave, although I suspect that they didn't grudgingly give in until large portions of San Diego County went up in flames. That probably caught their attention.)

PG Perspectives

by Phillip Giannangeli

Is there one among us who has not asked for divine retribution, guidance, or perhaps even forgiveness after a dark episode with one of those unique creatures who are said to trace their roots directly to our own species?

Are there any who haven't questioned their own sanity while trying to find a bit of normality in this almost impossible relationship of coexistence?

The overriding questions of the moment then are these: "Why did God create early adolescence?" and "How do we deal with this curse?"

Now that summer is here, parents and other innocents all over the country will be asking those and other more intriguing questions. And they'll be demanding answers from anyone who stands around long enough to get pigeonholed. Be forewarned.

Summer in San Diego brings us much of the best there is in life. It's our season. But summer also brings with it a time of tribulation; summer unleashes the teenage beast. Caged and controlled the previous nine months in zoological enclaves known as schools, these easily identifiable creatures now roam the community with impunity. The public, baffled and befuddled, cries out for assistance.

As one of the senior zoo keepers, let me pass on some advice. Parents, first remember this; your sentence is not even three months long. It could be worse. Society could demand that educational incarceration be limited to three months and an at-home/work program be instituted for the remaining nine months. Things don't look quite as bad now, do they? How about some specifics?

The most important thing you can do as a parent during these trying times is to get rid of that TV set. That may seem like it's taking comforting medication from an ailing person, but it is not! In the short run - the very short run - TV will seem to tranquilize your youngsters. In the long run, though it will give them ideas, expectations, and attitudes you won't want to deal with. Blow up the damn TV and give your kids tasks.

Remember when these wily creatures you're now dealing with were tots? They delighted in doing and learning. They still do, if you handle it right.

Don't start out by giving them something that's too easily completed. Instead of having them do the after dinner clean-up, assign them the whole dinner package. Give them ten bucks and tell them you'll expect dinner on the table at 6 p.m. If they pull a McDonald's on you (and remember these are the same demons who outfoxed you on the interpretation of the curfew law last week), don't be put off. The very next morning return to the battlefield with a $5 bill and tell them that's all you can afford, but you still expect them to cook up something for the evening meal. They can't get much fast food for five bucks so they'll have to be more inventive, check the pantry, and shop the store for bargains.

There are other ways to keep them busy while letting them actually get through the summer in one piece. You will, of course, have to dredge up that old painting law that says that no painting can be done until all surfaces are properly prepared and inspected by a certified adult.

So, if you play your cards right, this summer might turn out OK. And even if things don't go as smoothly as you'd like, September actually comes. Then you can turn these creatures over to us once more for safe-keeping and growth.

From my perspective, the best thing about summer is that it's a learning experience for those who don't attend school on a regular basis. And those folks tend to be very supportive the first few weeks of a new school term. Perhaps it has something to do with what they learned over the summer.

Things To Do!

Zoo keeps wee hours

This summer, the nighttime is the right time to do the zoo. The world-famous San Diego Zoo is staying open after dark for the first time ever.

"Nighttime Zoo" runs Thursday to Sunday until Sept. 4. The entry gates stay open until 9 p.m. each "Nighttime Zoo" night and visitors may stay on zoo grounds until 10 p.m.

A special, reduced nighttime admission price ($6.75 for adults, $2.75 for children age 11 and under) is available after 5 p.m. Regular day visitors to the zoo may stay for "Nighttime Zoo" fun free of charge.

White tigers, elephants, sun bears, leopards, koalas, flamingos and fruit bats will be on hand to greet the human "night owls" who explore the new "Nighttime Zoo."

Other highlights include strolling entertainers, delicious new dinner menus and a wildlife laser light show.

Church offers 'morality ratings' of movies

by Steven Saint

Ever wonder how various movies and videos got their ratings? Why is a movie rated PG-13 sometimes more racy than one rated R? Just how PG is that one?

The motion picture industry voluntarily rates films on the suitability of language, incidents of violence and adult situations for various age groups. These are not moral judgements, simply cultural standards of when most kids are ready for various types of scenes.

For parents (and others) interested in a second opinion, the Film and Broadcasting Office of the U.S. Catholic Conference rates movies and videos on the basis of their "moral suitability."

The ratings go like this: A-I for general patronage; A-II for adults and adolescents; A-III for adults; A-IV for adults with some reservations (this indicates films that, while not "morally offensive" in themselves, are not for casual viewing because they require "some analysis and explanation in order to avoid false impressions and interpretations"); and O for morally offensive films.

"The USCC rating system predates the movie industry's voluntary rating system," said Mark Patterson, media editor for the National Catholic News Service which publishes the ratings and reviews. "Concerns have been raised over the years that the industry's ratings have become relaxed. What was an R in the past might pass for PG-13 today."

While you may not care what a bunch of Catholic bureaucrats think of morality in films, it is interesting to compare their ratings with the standard industry ratings.

Ace Ventura: Pet Detective is rated PG-13 but got an O from the USCC. The R-rated Philadelphia, however, got an A-IV from the Catholics.

"Everything is looked at in context," said Patterson. "The depiction of nudity, for instance, in a gassing scene from 'Schindler's List' is different from what you would see in a film like 'Basic Instinct.'"

For comparison, here are the two different rating systems on this summer's most in-demand videos:

Ace Ventura: Pet Detective	(PG-13) O	Farewell My Concubine	(R) A-III	Kalifornia	(R) O	The Remains of the Day	(PG-13) A-II
Addams Family Values	(PG-13) A-II	Fatal Instinct	(PG-13) A-III	King of the Hill	(PG-13) A-II	Rising Sun	(R) O
The Age of Innocence	(PG) A-II	Fearless	(R) A-II	Last Action Hero	(PG-13) O	Robocop 3	(PG-13) O
Aladdin	(G) A-I	The Firm	(R) A-III	Loaded Weapon I	(PG-13) A-III	Rookie of the Year	(PG) A-II
American Cyborg	(R) O	Flesh and Bone	(R) A-III	The Long Day Closes	(PG) A-II	Ruby in Paradise	(R) A-III

Datz to appear locally

A musical evening of classical songs and arias will be presented by Tom Datz, tenor, accompanied by Irene Albrecht, pianist.

Datz is perhaps best known in San Diego for his leading roles in the glory days of Starlight Opera - "The Student Prince," "Desert Song," "Kismet," and more.

You may also remember him as the founder of the El Cajon Valley Music Theatre, which flourished in the Bostonia Ballroom during the early 1970s.

He has also appeared as a featured artist with numerous symphony orchestras, had leading roles in operas and worked the summer stock circuit on the East Coast.

The concert is Sunday, July 10, at 3:00 p.m. at the Lemon Grove Congregational United Church of Christ, 2770 Glebe Road. A donation of $5 is asked.

'Dixie Highway' rolls on

On June 1, La Mesan Julia Holladay, owner of Julia Holladay Productions, staged the world premiere of "Dixie Highway," an original musical.

A pop-country musical, "Dixie Highway's" original score reflects the diverse music of the late '60s with sounds from country, blues, folk and Motown. "Dixie Highway" takes place on July 20, 1969, the evening of the Apollo 11 moon landing. In a roadside diner in southern Kentucky.

The summer of 1994 marks the 25th anniversary of the lunar landing. The premiere of "Dixie Highway" captures the brief moment in time when the world watched history being made and felt like anything was possible. Dixie Highway runs through July 10 at the Hahn Cosmopolitan Theatre located at 444 Fourth Avenue in the Gaslamp Quarter. For information, call 234-9583.

Kiwanis Korner

by Del Kay

The Kiwanis Club of Lemon Grove is now entering the last Quarter of FY 1993-94. It is amazing how fast the year goes by. We completed our fund raisers successfully; and the funds raised are continually in the process of being given to those in need in our community. One of our primary objectives now is to acquire additional members so that next Fiscal Year 1994-95 will be even more successful. Being a member of Kiwanis gives you the opportunity to give aid or pleasure to others and to be a positive force in the community.

Kiwanians give primacy to the human and spiritual, rather than to the material values of life. We encourage the daily living of the "Golden Rule" in all human relationships. We promote the adoption and the application of higher social, business, and professional standards. We try to develop, by precept and example, a more intelligent, aggressive, and serviceable citizenship. Through our Kiwanis Club, we provide a practical means to form enduring friendships, to render altruistic service, and to build better communities. We also cooperate in creating and maintaining that sound public opinion and high idealism which make possible the increase of righteousness, justice, patriotism, and goodwill.

Surely there are a few good men and women in the Lemon Grove area who would love to be a part of this by becoming a Kiwanian. If you are interested in becoming a member of the Kiwanis Club of Lemon Grove, why not have lunch with us at one of our regular weekly meetings. We meet every Wednesday at noon at the Lemon Grove Community Center, 3146 School Lane, to reserve a spot, write to us at P.O. Box 193, Lemon Grove, CA 91946-0193.

This is your chance to give something back to your community!

Bus changes

by Laurie Rizzo

San Diego County Transit System's (CTS) Route 816 premiered in Lemon Grove on June 19 to help the city save money.

This new bus service replaces the part of San Diego Transit Route 16 which operated between Marketplace at the Grove and the Euclid Avenue Trolley Station.

"CTS" operation of this route will save the city scarce transit funds as well as provide for lower transit fares," said Doug Yount, Lemon Grove city manager.

Route 816 has the same routing, stops and a similar schedule as the Route 16, but with lower fares. Adult cash fare is $1, reduced from $1.50, and the youth cash fare is 75 cents, reduced from $1.50. The senior and disabled cash fare remains 75 cents. All regional monthly passes and single-ride tickets are accepted.

CTS will also initiate a new shuttle route in Lemon Grove on July 17 which will replace the Lemon Grove Dial-A-Ride. The Dial-A-Ride will cease operating after July 31.

Legion names Connolly 'Legislator of the Year'

The California American Legion presented Assemblyman Tom Connolly, D-77th, with its prestigious Legislator of the Year Award last weekend at its annual convention in Bakersfield.

Connolly received the award because of his legislative work on behalf of veterans. The first-term Assembly member reinstituted the long-dormant Veterans Affairs subcommittee and introduced a number of bills that assist veterans.

"I am proud that the American Legion has recognized my efforts to serve the 2.7 million veterans of California," Connolly said.

"The men and women who paid the price and bore the burden of freedom deserve effective representation in Sacramento, and I have worked hard to serve veterans."

"I am grateful to the American Legion for recognizing that effort."

Connolly, a decorated Vietnam combat veteran, is a member of American Legion Post 282 in La Mesa.

Six of Connolly's bills deal with veterans issues, including Assembly Bill 2457, which will require school districts to observe Veterans Day on November 11; AB 2892, which removes gender bias from the Military and Veterans Code; AB 3100, which expands the Cal-Vet home loan program; and, AB 3443, which will protect veterans organizations from unscrupulous professional fund-raisers.

Other efforts by Connolly in support of veterans includes support for a veterans Memorial, and introduction of a resolution honoring D-Day heroes.

Cox Cable to adjust charges

As a result of a second round of rate regulation recently ordered by the Federal Communication Commission (FCC), rates for Cox Cable San Diego's Basic service, Basic + Cable Programming Services (CPS) package and several equipment rentals will change beginning July 14.

According to Robert McRann, senior vice president and general manager of Cox Cable, the rate changes will be reflected on customer bills beginning July 6.

"We have made every effort to insure that the new rates and schedules comply with both the working and spirit of the new Cable Act," said McRann. "As with last September's first round of rate regulation, some customers will see rate decreases and other will see rate increases."

The overall effect of rate regulation on Cox customers will be as follows:

While all customers will receive a 6.7% reduction on Basic + Cable Programming Services, this reduction may be offset by adjustments allowed for inflation, new channel additions, programming costs and equipment.

A little over one-half of Cox customers will see a modest rate decrease and just under one-half of customers will receive a slight rate increase. Rates for renting remote controls, converters and addressable coders will increase by 33 - 40 percent.

Details of the above rate changes will be communicated to all customers by July 1.

Cox also announced that in response to public concern over the lack of full scrambling of audio and video, the Spice channel will be restricted to the time period of 10:30 p.m. to 6 a.m. until scrambling technological changes can be made.
